U.S. Lays Out Plan For GM

Taxpayers would own nearly three-quarters of auto giant

DETROIT | The government's new road map for General Motors would briefly send it into bankruptcy, erase most of its debt and eventually have it emerge leaner and stronger — and almost three-quarters owned by the taxpayers.

The outline came together Thursday after a bloc of GM's biggest bondholders agreed to a sweetened deal proposed by the Treasury Department to wipe out the automaker's unsecured debt in exchange for company stock. But GM still must settle on a buyer for its European Opel unit and decide the fate of its Hummer and Saturn brands, while workers across the country await news expected Monday on which 14 plants the company will close, shedding 21,000 more jobs.

A person familiar with GM's plans said it was "probable" that it would file for bankruptcy protection Monday. Under the plan, outlined in a regulatory filing, the U.S. Treasury, which already has loaned GM $19.4 billion, would get 72.5 percent of the company's stock and provide $30 billion in additional financing to keep the new GM operating under bankruptcy protection. Man Nearly Dies ... Of Embarrassment

Police said a man trying to enter a gated community in Pennsylvania's Pocono Mountains fell out of his truck while trying to open the gate and was run over by his own vehicle on Monday. The man wasn't injured but was found to be under the influence of alcohol. Police are awaiting the results of the blood test before deciding whether to charge him with driving under the influence. ANNOYING

Town's Signage Is Passive-Aggressive

Maybe Basalt, Colo., isn't so welcoming after all. That's the impression officials fear people will get when they enter the town, because new posted signs say "Warning" in red letters right below the sign that reads, "Welcome to Basalt." The warning refers to a town ordinance that prohibits drivers from letting their cars idle for more than two minutes. The town council has received several complaints about the signs. (AP) she believed the country would change only through a violent revolution. Sara Jane Moore told NBC's "Today" she now realizes her actions were "wrong ... a serious error." The appearance was Moore's first TV interview since she was released on parole in late 2007, NBC said. On Sept. 22, 1975, Moore fired on Ford as he waved to a crowd in San Francisco. Nominee's Abortion Views Unclear

Sotomayor's stance on the Roe v. Wade decision is unknown

WASHINGTON | One of the few things conservatives and liberals agree on when it comes to Sonia Sotomayor is that her views on abortion rights are a mystery — and one that must be solved before she can be confirmed as a Supreme Court justice.

Sotomayor's nomination has reopened a politically and emotionally charged debate over abortion that's energized interest groups on the left and right — all working to draw members, money and attention by ensuring the issue features prominently in the judge's confirmation hearings.

Unlike many liberal organizations that came out swiftly and enthusiastically to back Sotomayor, abortion-rights groups are withholding their support until she answers questions about the court's 1973 legalization decision and the principles behind it.

NARAL Pro-Choice America has praised her experience and background but has stopped well short of endorsing her. "We look forward to learning more about

Judge Sotomayor's views on the right to privacy and the landmark Roe v. Wade decision as the Senate's hearing process moves forward," the group's president, Nancy Keenan, said Tuesday.

Neither abortion rights advocates nor foes take any comfort from the abortion-related cases on which Sotomayor has ruled — none of which were decided based on the principles or precedents underlying Roe v. Wade.

"I don't think anybody can draw a conclusion," said Charmaine Yoest, the president of Americans United for Life, which opposes abortion rights.

On the opposite side, Vicki Saporta, president of the National Abortion Federation, said: "We don't have enough information to take a position at this time. We're waiting to learn more about Judge Sotomayor's views on the constitutional right to privacy, including the right to choose."

The White House says Obama didn't ask Sotomayor specifically about her view of Roe v. Wade or privacy rights, even though as a candidate in 2007, he said, "I would not appoint somebody who doesn't believe in the right to privacy." JULIE HIRSCHFELD DAVIS (AP)

Obama: It's Now or Never

President gears up for health care fight in call to supporters

WASHINGTON | President Obama warned Thursday that if Congress doesn't deliver health care legislation by the end of the year, the opportunity will be lost, a plea to political supporters to pressure lawmakers to act.

"If we don't get it done this year, we're not going to get it done," Obama told supporters by phone as he flew home to Washington on Air Force One from a West Coast fundraising trip.

Obama's political organization, Organizing for America, invited campaign volunteers to a mid-day conference call to describe a nationwide June 6 kickoff for its health care campaign. The president's message to his re-election campaign-in-waiting was simple: If volunteers don't pressure lawmakers to support the White House's goal on health care, Washington will drag its feet and nothing will change.

President Obama says Congress needs to pass health care legislation this year.

The presidential plea came as lawmakers prepare for an aggressive schedule of work aimed at producing comprehensive health care overhaul bills in the House and Senate by August.

"I think the status quo is unacceptable and that we've got to get it done this year," Obama repeated, ginning up his supporters for a door-to-door and phone-to-phone canvas similar to his presidential campaign. PHILIP ELLIOTT (AP)

Competing Crises Afflict S. Korea

Nation mourns death of ex-leader as North heightens its hostility

SEOUL, SOUTH KOREA | South Korean President Lee Myung-bak is juggling competing crises: the suicide of his predecessor and an increasingly belligerent North Korea.

South Korea has been in mourning since the shocking death Saturday of former President Roh Moo-hyun, a liberal recently questioned in a bribery probe some supporters claim was motivated by conservatives — led by Lee.

With the investigation deepening, the 62-year-old Roh — who prided himself on being a “clean” politician and denied the allegations — threw himself off a cliff behind his southern home. The funeral for Roh, whose death triggered a wave of grief in the nation of 49 million, is to be held Friday in Seoul.

Two days after Roh's death, with the nation still reeling, Lee faced a full-blown national security crisis when communist rival North Korea tested a nuclear bomb underground for the second time in less than three years.

A South Korean marine stands guard in western South Korea on Thursday.

The alert level of the joint command for South Korean and U.S. forces on the Korean peninsula — the highest it's been since North Korea's 2006 nuclear test. The level was raised Thursday, after the North renounced a 1953 truce with the South. Level I is the highest alert on the five-point scale.

The regime followed that with a series of short-range missile tests and on Wednesday renounced the truce the two Koreas signed at the close of the Korean War.

Fifteen months into his presidency, Lee has been hit by “trouble both at home and abroad,” said Hahm Sung-deuk, an expert on South Korean politics at Korea University in Seoul. The twin difficulties pose an “enormous crisis” for Lee, he said.

Pyongyang's belligerence is a sign that relations between the two Koreas are in serious trouble and indicate Seoul's loss of influence with the North, said Kim Hyung-joon, a political science professor at Myongji University in Seoul.

“North Korea appears to have concluded that there is nothing it can get from South Korea,” Kim said. KELLY OLSEN (AP)

Mexico Offers $380K for Details on Reporter's Killing

MEXICO CITY | Mexico's top prosecutor on Thursday offered a $380,000 reward for information in the kidnapping and murder of a newspaper reporter who was found beaten and dead in an irrigation canal in northern Mexico this week.

The Attorney General's Office said it would pay 5 million pesos to anyone providing “true, useful, relevant and opportune” intelligence that helps to identify and detain those involved in the killing of Eliseo Barron Hernandez.

The agency said it was the first time it has offered a reward to help solve the death of a journalist.

The agency announced its offer in the newspaper Milenio, which owns the paper for which Barron worked, La Opinion de Torreon.

Barron, who covered police news for 11 years in the northern state of Coahuila, was at home with his wife and two daughters on Monday night when armed men burst in and took him by force, according to Milenio.

Police found his battered body on Tuesday morning. It was dumped in an irrigation canal on a farm in the town of Gomez Palacio. (AP)

PESHAWAR, PAKISTAN | Militants detonated two bombs in a busy market and attacked two police checkpoints in northern Pakistan on Thursday, killing at least 14 people, wounding scores more and testing the resolve of the government as it takes on the Taliban in the Swat Valley.

The attacks in Peshawar and Dera Ismail Khan happened within two hours of each other and a day after an assault on security forces in the eastern city of Lahore killed about 30 people. That strike was claimed by the Pakistani Taliban, who warned of further attacks unless the government called off the Swat offensive.

"Our targets are security forces, who are killing innocent people in Swat and other adjoining areas," said Hakimullah Mehsud, a deputy to Pakistani Taliban chief Baitullah Mehsud. "We regret that some innocent people were also killed in the Lahore attack."

He said other attacks were planned for Multan, Rawalpindi, Lahore and the capital, Islamabad, and urged civilians to flee.

Two bombs on motorcycles in Peshawar exploded within seconds of each other, police said. "It was a sudden blast, and then there was fire all around," said Khair Uddin, a shopkeeper. RIAZ KHAN (AP)

Va. DMV prohibits smiling in photos to help prevent ID theft

Few places in Virginia are as draining to the soul and as numbing to the buttocks as the branch offices of the Department of Motor Vehicles. And yet, until recently, smiling was still permitted there.

No more. As part of the DMV's effort to develop super-secure driver's licenses and foolproof identification cards, the agency has issued a smile ban, directing customers to adopt a "neutral expression" in their portraits, thereby extinguishing whatever happiness comes with finally hearing one's number called. The driver's license photo, it seems, is destined to look like a mug shot.

DMV officials say the smile ban is for a good cause. The agency

At more than half the Virginia DMV's 74 offices, smiling has banned in photos for driver's licenses and ID cards to develop a facial recognition system for security.

would like to develop a facial recognition system that could compare customers' photographs over time to prevent fraud and identity theft. "The technology works best when the images are similar," said DMV spokeswoman Pam Goheen. "To prepare for the possibility of future security enhancements, we're asking customers to maintain a neutral expression."

When asked how DMV employees are able to determine when customers might be smiling too much, Goheen explained that the process is automated. Naturally, the new software is programmed to reject attempts at exuberance or human warmth. "It will send an error message if it detects a non-neutral expression," she said.

The ban is in effect at more than half of the agency's 74 offices statewide, Goheen said, including most Northern Virginia branches.

"It makes everyone look like criminals," said Arthur Freeman, 18, who needed no prompting to appear unhappy after waiting two hours for a motorcycle license. "I don't usually smile for these pictures anyway."

MISTAKES An Apology — Sort Of D.C. Mayor Adrian Fenty appeared on WRC-4 Thursday and addressed the issue of a new pool heater being installed at East Potomac Pool at a cost of $75,000 to the city. The pool, which Fenty uses regularly, was the only one of D.C.'s 19 outdoor pools to get an upgrade. Fenty said during his "Connecting With the Mayor" segment, "I did know about that. In retrospect, [it was] probably not something that we should have done. I've made a lot of mistakes as the mayor of the District of Columbia."

A woman walks by AOL's corporate headquarters in New York City on Thursday. Media titan Time Warner announced it's spinning off AOL into a separate company.

Time Warner, AOL Ready to Part Ways

Blockbuster merger from the dot-com era ends with a whimper

NEW YORK | Time Warner Inc. is dumping AOL after spending nearly a decade trying to build a new-age media empire only to wind up in a weaker position than when the marriage began.

The divorce, announced Thursday, will spin out AOL as a separate company run by former Google advertising executive Tim Armstrong. He was hired in March to try to restore the luster to a brand once known as America Online.

Although AOL has been eclipsed by Google and other Internet stars, Armstrong still can try to build on a wide-reaching online ad network and AOL's

Web sites, which remain a relatively big draw.

Time Warner owns 95 percent of AOL and will buy out Google's 5 percent stake during the third quarter for an undisclosed amount. From there, AOL — which has about 7,000 employees — will be spun off into a publicly traded company around the end of the year.

The $147 billion deal in which AOL bought Time Warner in 2001 epitomized the mind-boggling wealth created during the dot-com boom and quickly became one of the worst corporate combinations in history. In 2002 and 2003, Time Warner absorbed nearly $100 billion in charges to account for the rapidly diminishing value of the combined company, which today sports a market value of just $27 billion. The O's Future Is Now

After 2 years of anticipation, Wieters heads to the majors as Baltimore's prized prospect

ORIOLES | For two years, scouts, writers and baseball executives have raved about Baltimore Orioles catching prospect Matt Wieters, who will make his major league debut Friday at Camden Yards against Don-trelle Willis and the Detroit Tigers.

The fifth overall pick in the 2007 draft is big and strong, can hit for average and power, and has advanced defensive skills and the demeanor to handle a pitching staff.

Wieters is batting .305 with five home runs and 30 RBI at Triple-A Norfolk. He has heated up lately, with 18 hits, including four homers and 18 RBI, in his past 46 at-bats (.391 batting average).

"He is really starting to hit the ball; he has been on quite a streak over the last 10 days," Orioles president of baseball operations Andy MacPhail said Tuesday night. "He has made the progress; the power is starting to come. It's time."

Wieters' bat seemed big-league ready after he bashed Single-A and Double-A pitching last year for a combined 27 home runs, 91 RBI and a .355 average, earning Baseball America's Player of the Year honors.

Still, Wieters was sent to Norfolk in March, partially so he'd have six-plus seasons with the Orioles before being eligible for free agency and partially because the organization thought he

THE PRE-HYPE

Wieters is already a hit with Orioles fans, who've created a satirical site, <http://www.mattwietersfacts.com>, devoted to his promised greatness. Among their comments:

1 Sliced bread is actually the best thing since Matt Wieters.

2 Brian Roberts will ride Matt Wieters to victory in next year's Preakness.

3 Spock traveled back in time, again, to watch Matt Wieters play his first game in an Orioles uniform.

4 When Matt Wieters makes his major league debut at Camden Yards, the standing ovation he receives will be so loud that hearing people will go deaf, deaf people will go blind, blind people will become fully paralyzed and all other life forms will cease to exist.

needed more seasoning, especially defensively.

"He doesn't have to work on a lot," Norfolk manager and former major league catcher Gary Allenson said. "If anything, he needs to get better on specific skills. He does a real good job calling a game, but there are still little tweaks there, little things that come with experience."

What has impressed Allenson the most is the way Wieters has handled the hype surrounding him. On a trip to Charlotte, N.C., Allenson said the team bus arrived at about midnight and there were "10 to 12 people waiting there for his autograph."

Allenson said Wieters is dealing with the attention — from fans and the media — effortlessly.

"There's definitely been extra media, but it's not a distraction," Wieters said.

But Orioles president of baseball operations Andy MacPhail said his main concern is putting Wieters in a position to succeed — not controlling media pressure. "You'd like to downplay it, but the events are such that you don't control what's going to happen," MacPhail said. "There are a lot of worse things to deal with in sports."

SOCCER A View From Above The Vatican newspaper made a rare foray into sports, praising Barcelona's triumph over Manchester United in the Champions League final as a victory of creativity over athleticism. "Football, Finally" was the headline in Thursday's editions of L'Osservatore Romano next to a photo of Barcelona coach Pep Guardiola thrown into the air by his players. The paper praised the Catalan team for teaching a "lesson in style" to a soccer world often dominated by bitter disputes. (AP)

NATIONALS | BY MATT SWENSON

Power of Being Positive

Losing tests Dunn's optimism, but his bat remains a force

NATIONALS | When Adam Dunn was getting to know the media around the Washington Nationals' clubhouse at the start of the season, he made sure they knew one thing about him right from the start: He is, by nature, an optimistic man.

“I'm just tired of talking about losses period.”

He will playfully chastise a reporter if he senses a line of questioning is fishing for a critical or frustrated response.

“You're always negative,” he said, with a half-smile, to one tape recorder-wielding journalist. “Why is that?”

But seasons like the one the Nationals are enduring — when offensive outbursts are regularly undone by late-inning bullpen implosions and the team has five fewer wins than any other club — well, that will challenge anyone's sunny mental outlook.

After a recent loss, Dunn patiently answered questions about the day's game, his costly throwing error and another ninth-inning collapse. When asked whether he was tired of finding words to describe losses, his positive facade began to show cracks. “I'm just tired of talking about losses period,” he said.

Recently, though, Dunn has been doing all he can to have a positive impact with his bat. His 16 home runs are tied for the third most in baseball, and his .283 batting average is 35 points higher than his career average. In the last four games, he has had five hits, and four have been home runs Dunn's most impressive performance of the season came last Sunday, when he nearly single-handedly willed the Nationals to a win over the Orioles. Dunn hit two home runs, including a go-ahead grand slam, in the 8-5 victory.

“He showed [Sunday] the difference that he makes in our lineup and how much we need him here,” manager Manny Acta said.

DEREK TURNER

Steroids? You Can't Be Serious

IF THE NATIONALS really are taking steroids, they should get some better ones.

There is no evidence — neither from the Florida drug dealer arrested Wednesday nor from the team's performance on the field — that indicates any players are using performing-enhancing drugs.

In the next 10 days, the Nationals are going to probably select Stephen Strasburg with the No. 1 overall pick in the draft. At the rate the team is going this season, it will likely be in the same position next year.

Given that lowly standing, any doping accusations seem ... crazy.

Given that lowly standing, any doping accusations seem as crazy as when lanky John McEnroe was accused of using steroids.

With just two wins since May 15, Washington's record has fallen to 13-33. Its .283 winning percentage is more than 100 points lower than the next worst team's.

The Manny Acta firing watch has officially begun.

It's not that he's a bad manager, for how could we tell given the talent he's had to work with? At some point, though, the Lerner family has to make a public statement that it can't stand this absurd amount of losing.

From Acta's perspective, a dismissal would be a reprieve. Imagine having to watch the bullpen blow game after game each night.

Steroids? We only wish such a charge wasn't so laughable.

DISCUSSIONS

BOZ ON NATS

Will Adam Dunn have more homers than the Nats have wins this year?

Great question. Dunn is now leading 16 to 13. No, I don't think so. But Dunn's gargantuan homer off Santana Wednesday night — he really is in the Frank Howard category — and the utter misery of the inert way the Nats were swept by the Mets does make you wonder what's possible.

Stan Kasten has said that the Nats would like to draft pitchers with the No. 1 (obviously) and No. 9a picks. In your opinion, what would you do with the 9a pick?

I'd defy the poor history of high-pick pitchers and draft Strasburg with No. 1 overall. But I wouldn't dare the fates twice. I'd go for the best hitter (as long as he isn't a third baseman) with the 10th overall pick.

You're very unlikely to get any significant upgrade mid-season with a firing.

Assuming Manny Acta is on the short leash, who replaces him?

Jim Riggleman or perhaps Tim Lincecum in the minors are the obvious options. Riggleman has a 522-652 career managing record. Is he one of those “failed before but good now” guys? It's tough to have a .445 winning percentage in 1,174 games. Foli is a firebrand, or was when young. But you're very unlikely to get any significant upgrade mid-season with a firing. That's one reason that you don't want to give up on him, because his style (pure no-explosion Torre) drives so many people crazy with a 13-33 team.

United hopes goalie will emerge from its 3-way competition

UNITED | D.C. United will take its streak of four consecutive league ties to Foxborough on Saturday for a match against the New England Revolution (2-3-4), which has advanced to three MLS Cup finals, thanks in part to the consistent play of goalkeeper Matt Reis over the past five years.

United (3-1-7), meanwhile, has fielded four starting goalies in four seasons, and so far this spring has shuttled between Liberian veteran Louis Crayton, journeyman Josh Wicks and Serbian rookie Milos Kocic. The club has employed some quality keepers in the past — Troy Perkins was MLS' goalie of the year in 2006 — but has been closer to following Joe Gibbs' model of winning Super Bowls with different quarterbacks. D.C.'s four MLS titles were won by four goalies.

Now, one third of the way through the 2009 season, United is waiting for one in its trio to seize the job. Crayton has started six games,

Wicks four and Kocic three. Veteran defender Bryan Namoff said, "You'd like to" have the same starter each time, "but it's up to those three."

Wicks fell to third on the depth chart after playing twice in March but then appeared to stake the most serious claim to the top spot with a command performance in last weekend's 0-0 draw with Real Salt Lake. After playing against New York the previous Wednesday, he had five saves — some outstanding — and was an authoritative presence against Salt Lake.

Acquired from Los Angeles in March trade, Wicks, 25, spent three years in the minors. "As a keeper, it's always good to get consistent games and get a rhythm. It's kind of tough when you play one game and then wait a few weeks

Coach Tom Soehn said Wicks' performance may have been the one the team was looking for. "He stepped up and he did a great job. ... He did what he needed to do win us a game," Soehn said. Penguins Look To Repeat History in Finals

Crosby and co. draw comparisons to great Oilers teams in '80s

STANLEY CUP | Gretzky, Crosby, Messier, Malkin. Oilers, Penguins?

The Pittsburgh Penguins, led by Sidney Crosby and Evgeni Malkin, are the first team since the 1983 Edmonton Oilers to return to the Stanley Cup finals a season after losing in them.

They're eager to find out whether they're ready to make a breakthrough similar to that of Wayne Gretzky, Mark Messier and the Oilers when they won a Stanley Cup in a rematch against the aging Islanders.

"They're the champs, and they'll be a big challenge for us," forward

Evgeni Malkin has led the Penguins to the first finals rematch since 1983.

Miroslav Satan said before Detroit beat Chicago in Game 5 of the Conference finals Wednesday.

If so, the Penguins believe they'll be better prepared than they were in 2008, when the Red Wings won.

But the 21-year-old Crosby, who has been compared to Gretzky since he was a preteen, says the comparisons to the Oilers aren't valid until he wins a cup.

"They've won cups and ... we've yet to do that," Crosby said. ALAN ROBINSON (AP)

Chris and Marsy Shattuck, siblings who have lived together for about four years, stand outside their Columbia Heights townhouse. The pair also live with a roommate.

Roomies? Oh, Brother

Siblings opt to share their living quarters despite the obvious potential for disaster

We stood at the Home Depot paint-mixing counter in an exasperated stalemate, paper samples of “Village Square” and “Toffee Crunch” shades clenched in our fists.

Then she said it. “I ... hate ... you.” Her voice was flat and even, as frustration culminated in those three words. Then, to the horror of the salesman helping us, Tracey burst into tears.

Uh-oh. Maybe living with my sister wasn’t such an inspired idea.

It was May 2008 and we were two weeks away from moving into the two-bedroom condo we’d bought together in Clarendon. How was I going to survive living with my younger sibling of three and a half years if we couldn’t agree on how many gallons of paint we needed for our pad? But the contracts were signed, the mortgage loan ratified — I looked at Tracey and knew there was no turning back.

Of course, if I’d consulted roommate and sibling relationship experts before signing the lease, they would’ve predicted potential disaster.

“Our relationships with our siblings are very passionate ones,” says Dorothy Rowe, a psychologist whose book, “My Dearest Enemy, My Dangerous Friend” ($18, Routledge), focuses on the dynamics of sibling relationships. “We care enormously about what our siblings think of us: their praise, their approval,” Rowe says. “At the same time, we’re scared of their criticism. If you’ve grown up together, your sibling knows just what to say to upset you, tease you or really hurt you. It’s a very complicated relationship that doesn’t get simpler as you get older.”

It doesn’t hurt when your roommate is also a confidant you’ve known since, well, birth.

In other words, even at 24 and 28, respectively, Tracey and I can revert back to whining kids.

“You developed a relationship with your sibling from such a young age where you learned to fight in a certain way,” says Amy Zalneraitis, author of “Room for Improvement: The Post-College Girl’s Guide to Roommate Living” ($14, Simon Spotlight). “You might think you’ve gotten over it as you’ve gotten older, but if you put yourself back in a situation that you were in up until you were 18 years old, you’d probably start fighting.”

Even worse, the fight fodder has grown exponentially, thanks to adulthood. There are still squabbles over who left the dishes in the sink. But this time, say Rowe and Zalneraitis, there are additional triggers that can range from financial management to learning more

SHARE FAIR

Sage Siblings

You’re thinking of moving in with a bro or sis (maybe both!). One prerequisite? Well, actually liking each other is key. What else do you need to consider after you’ve finished squabbling over the larger room? We asked those who have been there for advice.

SEPARATE YOUR STUFF

Whether it’s laundry or leftover pizza, it doesn’t hurt to mark your turf. “We don’t do food shopping or anything together. We’re pretty territorial about that sort of stuff,” says Dan Heynen, who lives with his brother, Dominik. “But we probably were for the first 18 years.”

GO THE DISTANCE

Just because you’re related and live together doesn’t mean you need to be BFFs. “We have our own separate social lives,” says Chris Shattuck, who lives with his sister, Marsy. “She might go out and do something and I don’t have to talk to her for a couple days to know what’s going on. Having that distance can be really good.”

PATIENCE IS A NECESSARY VIRTUE

Even if it’s your bratty bro, manners and respect still matter. “Remember, you’re an adult,” says Dominik Heynen. “Try not to look for excuses to fight with each other. Be more patient. You might have to be even more patient with someone you know than with someone you don’t know.”

SCHEDULE CLEANING TIME

Whether you keep up with it or not, at least attempt to share responsibility for your mess. “We try to set some ground rules,” says Dan Heynen, “[but] we’re not that great at following them. For example, we’ll say, ‘You’re in charge of cleaning up the bathroom on this day, and you’re in charge of cleaning the kitchen.’ Sometimes it turns into a free-for-all. You clean up after yourself. ... We generally try to watch out for ourselves, and if someone isn’t doing it, you point it out.” KRIS CORONADO (EXPRESS) than one would ever want to know about a relative's sex life.

This may explain why Bank of America Mortgage vice president and senior loan officer Christian Hartung, who has financed home loans in the D.C., Maryland and Virginia region for the last seven years, isn't seeing many joint home loan applications from siblings.

Another buying pattern has caught his eye, however. "I have seen a lot of friends who have bought property together ... like current roommates who are renting that don't qualify [for a loan] as an individual — they decide this is a great time to buy."

After an extensive search for D.C.-area siblings who lived together, I found just a few pairs. Yet, whereas Tracey and I had bought a place together, these sibs all rented, cautiously opting for temporary situations instead.

Take Chris Shattuck, 32, and his 29-year-old sister Marsy Shattuck. It's impressive that the pair their 84-year-old father from their childhood Rockville home to a full-time Alzheimer's care facility in Friendship Heights. They'd inherited a mortgage and a houseful of memories at an age where "responsibility" usually means grappling with car payments. Chris Shattuck lived in Dupont; Marsy Shattuck was in Manhattan. Soon, it became clear that selling the house from afar wasn't going to work.

"We said, 'OK, let's move back there,'" says Chris Shattuck, a teacher at Rosslyn's Inlingua English Center. "There's no rent, and we can get things settled."

So, in September 2005, they resettled under the same roof they'd lived under until they were 18 — minus Mom and Dad. Well, that's not entirely true. As they sifted through memorabilia and readied the house for sale, the Shattucks realized the parental roles were still being played.

"We'd have an argument and then look at each other and be, like, 'Oh, my god, we just had an argument Mom and Dad would have had,'" says Marsy Shattuck, an interactive Web designer at the Discovery Channel.

There were lots of those fights. "You've heard stories about how dealing with a house or an inheritance breaks up families," says Chris Shattuck. "I know people who are 20 years older than me who are in court with their siblings over this stuff."

A year and half later, in June 2007, they did get something in writing: another lease. This time it was for a Columbia Heights townhouse.

"It was much more than either of us could afford on our own," explains Chris Shattuck. "We said, 'Maybe we can just live together a little while longer.'"

Two years later, things are going swimmingly for the duo and roommate Jessica Blond.

"There have been times when I've wanted to kill them both because they're screaming at each other and I'm in the middle," admits Blond, 29, a management consultant at BDA Global, who has lived with the pair since those first tumultuous days. "I'll think, 'Why do I have to deal with this stress?'"

Before signing on to live with the Shattucks a second time, Blond briefly considered moving into a seven-person house she'd found on Craigslist, but she ended up nixing the idea. "They needed somebody else to be a reason to move," she says, "so, it really wasn't a question. It was three bedrooms. ... I felt like I played a really important part by being able to diffuse situations."

Things were slightly less complicated for Dan and Dominik Heynen.

After growing up in Greenwich, Conn., the 26-year-old identical twins went to separate colleges. Yet when both graduated in 2005 and got consulting gigs at Corporate Executive Board that August, chipping in on a two-bedroom Dupont Circle apartment was a no-brainer.

fore graduating in D.C., and he crashed at my apartment in Georgetown," says Dan Heynen. "We'd [lived together] for 18 years, so I pretty much knew what to expect."

This time, they had the added bonus of not sharing the bunk beds

When a sibling's actions bug you, there's less likely to be a guard at the gate if you feel like venting.

they did as kids. And they discovered plenty of other unexpected perks of living together.

One example is when Dominik Heynen tore his left ACL playing ultimate Frisbee last summer. After knee surgery, he was bedridden for four days before being able to hobble on crutches. "Two days after his surgery, he couldn't really bathe himself," says Dan. "So, I'd help him get into the tub. Stuff you don't think twice about" — but probably not a job for a random roomie.

It also doesn't hurt to have a confidant you've known since, well, birth. "When I'm having a bad day, I can call Chris and say, 'Chris, I need help. I'm struggling,'" says Marsy Shattuck. "He's so good. He's right there."

The downside? You have a confidant you've known since, well, birth. When it's a sibling, there's less likely to be a guard at the gate if that dirty pile of laundry is grating on your nerves or, says Dominik Heynen, you feel like venting. "You're more willing to talk even if the other person isn't listening. It's like, 'Oh, whatever, he can put up with this. He's not going anywhere; he's my brother.'"

And since you've come from the same background, having too much in common might not be the best for one's personal growth. Dominik Heynen acknowledges it's cool that he and his brother share some interests — both play on the same ultimate Frisbee team — but at times he wonders whether

"maybe living with someone else brings in new experiences."

Will this be the case for everyone? It depends, author Rowe says. "There's only one thing you can say about all siblings," she laughs. "There's no one thing you can say about all siblings."

The reason co-habitation works for some and not for others basically boils down to one simple fact: It depends on who you are and where you are in life.

The situation works for Dan and Dominik Heynen because the young Washingtonians had a readily available support system as they began post-collegiate careers. Chris and Marsy Shattuck's move, on the other hand, was precipitated by the pressure of familial responsibility — and being able to support one another in its aftermath.

In the case of Tracey and me, living together was also a conscious choice, but for a different reason. We'd both lived separately in various roommate situations during and after college, but as the housing market continued to drop in January 2008, we realized we had an opportunity to invest in a condo that would have been inconceivable a couple years earlier. This was our chance to have a stylish "grown-up" home of our own. We took it.

That's how we found ourselves at Home Depot on that fateful May afternoon.

It was a split-second after Tracey's tears began that I noticed something peculiar: She was also hysterically laughing. She was still bleary-eyed when she looked at me and smiled. "I really do hate you, you know." This time, her voice was broken by giggles.

"I know," I replied. In those few seconds, the tension between us evaporated. We stood there — in the paint department — cracking up. Customers heading to checkout lines gave us quizzical looks. They'd never get the unspoken joke only two sisters could understand.

That's when I knew moving in with Tracey wasn't such a bad idea.

To this day, I can't remember how much paint we bought.

Vintage furnishings are a low-cost way to add personality and value to your home

When Dale Denton, 53, bought a vacation home at Maryland's Deep Creek Lake, she didn't have a huge budget for redecorating. That's one reason she contacted Yuppie Decor (256-683-5731; Yuppiedecor.com), a Shirlington-based business that's open by appointment only, to score some items for her new getaway.

"They've got an eye," she says of owners Aaron and Shannon Hase, who breathe new life into old furnishings via bold paint jobs and fabrics. Denton purchased two chairs from them she would have never looked at twice in their original state.

"They had some chairs I would refer to as a 1970s Mediterranean nightmare," says Denton, who manages the Julia Gray showroom at the Washington Design Center. "In their original life, they were probably done in, I'm guessing, a really buttery cream color, and they probably had some cheesy gold trim on them. Yuppie Decor took those chairs and made them stark white. Suddenly, something that was completely unattractive became attractive, and the exaggerated shape in white became architectural almost in its look."

Sometimes all it takes is a little bit of paint or some TLC to make something old feel new again. And sometimes that great table or dresser you find at a thrift shop, yard sale or consignment store can move right into your home as is.

Plenty of people have had a penchant for vintage furnishings for years. It might be the thrill of the hunt or an interest in collecting that drives their secondhand shopping. But as the state of the economy leads to all sorts of belt-tightening, more and more people are taking a new look at old pieces.

"I like to say that thrift is the new black," says Stan Williams, the New York-based author of "The Find" ($27.50, Clarkson Potter), which offers tips and techniques for decorating with vintage pieces. "We're seeing many, many people venturing into thrift stores to save money."

Those savings can sometimes be significant. "You can get a farm table in here for, like, $195, as opposed to $1,200 [elsewhere]," says Pixie Windsor, owner of D.C.'s Miss Pixie's Furnishings & Whatnot (1626 14th St. NW; 202-232-8171; Misspixies.com). "While there's been an economic downturn since October, this business and a lot of people I know in this business are doing really well."

But just because you nabbed a bargain doesn't mean everyone else will be able to tell. Maria Fyodorova, a D.C. resident who runs the Righteous (re)Style blog (Righteousrestyle.com), found a dining set handcrafted by a small company in South Carolina for $200 on Craigslist. "It's just beautiful and beautifully made," says

— STAN WILLIAMS,
VINTAGE DECOR EXPERT

Fyodorova, 36. "People come over and say, 'It's so amazing — where did you get that?' It's hard for them to believe we bought it secondhand."

Going vintage is not only easy on your wallet; it's easy on the environment, too. "I think as people become more interested in the environment, they're interested in being able to repurpose what they already have or what's already out there in the world, rather than creating new demand for new products," says Rachael Grad, an

— whether that means opening drawers or stretching out on a sofa — to see whether everything works as it should. Make sure nothing wobbles, creaks or shakes, which are all signs that the item might be better left behind. And unless you're super-crafty, it's probably best to avoid anything that needs more than a minor face-lift.

And in some cases, even that may not really be necessary. "Sometimes you just have to give things a really good cleaning," says Windsor. "With wood things, I clean them with lemon oil or Murphy's Oil Soap. It's really surprising the difference it makes. And if you didn't pay a lot for it and it's not a rare antique, paint it to match what you already have."

you absolutely have to have it, it's probably worthwhile. "Buy only what you love," Williams says. "Buy something that speaks to you — don't buy something just because it's collectible or might be valuable. If you buy things that you love, you will find a place for it."

When Yuppie Decor's Aaron Hase, a 27-year-old Alabama native, found a turn-of-the-20th-century photo of an Alabama fire department, he wound up with a piece that will always have a place in his home. "I'll keep it forever," he says. "It has a lot of character and has meaning for us."

Items like these can add personality to a room. "It's fun to spice up your space and not have stuff that all looks like Pottery Barn or Crate & Barrel or is exactly matching," says Windsor. "It's fun to throw something in there that's fun and eclectic."

That might even include things such as salvaged mantels, doors and sinks. "They add a level of charm you don't get with a lot of new construction," says Donetta George, owner of D.C.'s Brass Knob Architectural Antiques (2311 18th St. NW; 202-332-3370; Thebrassknob.com). "And the design is so much more interesting. You can get things you're not going to see anywhere else."

Incorporating salvaged items isn't that hard, especially if you know a good carpenter or plumber. George says that even condo and townhouse owners can add them with relative ease and in most cases don't need special permission.

Even something as simple as vintage hardware can make a big difference in a home. "People will go into a house and they'll never say, 'Boy, that house has beautiful hardware,' but they will look around and say, 'Boy, this house looks really good,'" says George. "It just makes the house look better — it makes the house look more valuable."

"Adding vintage and thrift pieces to a home adds instant heritage — it adds instant warmth," says Williams. And displaying Grandpa's antique cocktail shaker or vintage travel posters doesn't cost a dime, but it can help your space reflect everything from your family tree to your current hobbies and interests.

"I always tell people to incorporate their personality," Hase says. "It's so much better if things have a story behind them." BETH LUBERECKI

expert opinion

A staging pro shares tips on how to make your home sale-ready

PATRICIA EBRAHIMI claims her first staging job was when she was 12 years old, when her mom said she had to share a room with her sister. A few rearranged beds and a room divider later, Ebrahimi realized she had a knack for bringing out the potential in a space through creative design.

In 2005, Ebrahimi started professionally staging homes in the the space to appeal to the broadest set of buyers, so don't take it personally.

"You did a great job making it a home," Ebrahimi says. "Now it's a product for sale."

Home staging is especially crucial in vacant spaces because it shows buyers how furniture can fit in a room. In this type of situation, pieces with simple straight lines and tables with glass tops often help make the space look bigger, Ebrahimi says.

"People don't have visual imagination," she says. "You have to help potential buyers make an emotional connection with a property and say, 'Yeah, I could live here; it feels good.'"

Ebrahimi gave Express a few quick and easy tips on how to carry out mini-home makeovers that can make a sale.

“Everyone looks better elegantly dressed than naked — unless you're a swimsuit model — and that's the same for real estate.”

D.C. market and founded the Rockville-based business Show-Smart! (Tinyurl.com/obxcw9; 757-619-9789) to help homeowners make their properties more attractive to potential buyers.

"Everyone looks better elegantly dressed than naked — unless you're a swimsuit model — and that's the same for real estate," she says.

Ebrahimi says sellers need to accent the best features of their property — a great layout, floors, renovated kitchen, lots of storage space or a master bathroom, for example — and play down the negatives. It's about neutralizing

Get some pull

For a quick fix with major impact, Ebrahimi suggests replacing handles on kitchen cabinets and the knobs on bathroom vanities. Chuck the ornate or dated hardware and opt for simple round knobs in a satin nickel or rubbed bronzed finish. LIBERTY HARDWARE (Libertyhardware.com) sells an attractive, inexpensive line at Home Depot, Lowe's Hardware and True Value stores.

7 Cut the clutter

Homes that aren't completely moved out of look bedraggled and abandoned, Ebrahimi says. They scream, "I'm desperate, I'm carrying two mortgages and need to sell now!" Of course, there's also the other extreme: people who have been in their home 30 years and have walls covered in family photos, mementos and awards.

"People are buying square footage, not your stuff," Ebrahimi says. "Even if your home is well-decorated, if it's personal and outdated, people will feel like a guest." PUBLIC STORAGE (Publicstorage.com) rents units for $1 the first month. Typical units are 5 feet by 5 feet, but the $1 rate also applies to 5-feet-by-10 feet units on up – the second month rate varies from about $78 to $120 per month, depending on location and demand. JOSIE ROBERTS

2 Sold on shades

Do you want to sell your home to someone who loves the wild color you chose in your living room, or do you just want to sell the place, period? Sellers need to neutralize their accent walls, says Ebrahimi, who recommends Benjamin Moore colors such as BARREN PLAIN, NAVAJO WHITE OR BRADSTREET BEIGE.

4 No paper trail

Ugly wallpaper tops the list of turnoffs. Four words: It has to go. Simply mix some DOWNY FABRIC SOFTENER with hot water — as hot as you can stand it — then spray it on the seams and saturate the paper to melt the glue. "It's messy," Ebrahimi warns.

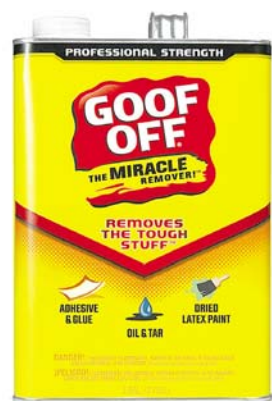

5 Hard To miss

Hardwood floors are the real-estate equivalent of six-pack abs — they're rare, they shouldn't be concealed with unsightly fabrics, and they can make interested suitors swoon. To spruce up your floors, roll down REJUVENATE ($17.97, Home Depot) like a deck stain to get a glossy finish. It's like putting a layer of clear nail polish on the floor. Ebrahimi says, "The stuff is magic."

6 Fake it to make it

Vignette staging, or filling an empty room with just a few basic items, works well for some units. Simply bring in a chair and some small tables and hang a few pictures on the wall. Then, blow up an air mattress and add sheets, a comforter and a headboard.

3 Color between The lines

Save face after a sloppy paint job with GOOF OFF ($7.19, 16 oz., True Value), which can remove any latex paint that's gotten on floorboards, cabinets or chair rails. Yes, that's Goof Off, as in: We goofed; let's get it off.

Emme

PLUS-SIZE SUPERMODEL, CANCER SURVIVOR

Curves have always looked chic on pioneering plus-size model Emme (aka Melissa Aronson), who rode her Nordic good looks — and relentlessly positive attitude — to style-world stardom. The former "Fashion Emergency" TV host, who recently beat Hodgkin's disease, now runs a lively blog (Emmestyle.com).

What did your battle with cancer teach you?

It made me take an inventory of what toxins I was putting in my body. I changed everything I was eating, too. And I started meditating. It was scary, because I was used to always moving and going fast, and I had to slow down.

And it changed your beauty routine, too?

Yeah, I had to take a look at all the stuff I was slathering on my face and hair. So many products are full of bad things — toxins, parabens. Now I use the Hemp Body Butter from the Body Shop, and my skin is so thankful. And I use essential oils instead of perfume. My favorite one is vanilla.

You've always been a role model for plus-size women. Has clothing for them gotten better?

Yes and no. I think some stores are really getting it right, like Torrid. They have compassion. And it's nice to see that big-box retailers like Target and Forever 21 are coming out with full-figured styles.

But the plus-size market still isn't what it could or should be?

No, there aren't that many stores that have incredible full-figured lines. There's a customer who is younger, more athletic and looking for clothes that are more fitted. She needs to be supplied. More designers should cater to these customers. It's silly not to.

Are there any secret shops or Web sites for plus-size women?

I like Junonia.com for active wear. It's one of the few companies doing

"Take out a tape measure before you go to the mall. If you don't know your shape, you can't shop."

exercise clothes for us. And Bradley Bayou is doing a great job with his line for QVC.

Any big designers doing curvier clothing?

Michael Kors, but you don't often hear him talking about it.

Do you have any shopping tips for curvy gals?

Take out a tape measure before you go to the mall. Don't be afraid to see what your proportions are. Really look at yourself. Ask, "Do I have nice legs?" or "Do I have broad shoulders?" If you don't know your shape, you can't shop.

Any general tips to keep in mind when getting dressed?

Many plus-size women don't layer, because I think they are afraid it adds bulk. But every woman needs a good cardigan to wear over a dress or a nice cami to layer under things.

Which celebs do you think show off their curves the best?

Jennifer Hudson is curvaceous, and she gets designers to make her dresses. Take a look at the tricks they use — ruching, iridescent fabrics that don't emphasize every bump. JENNIFER BARGER (EXPRESS)

ANSWERS FROM THE SHOE BLOGGER

I'm in love. The object of my desire has no idea. I'm planning on telling him, but I am scared (and too young to purchase liquid courage). I need shoes that are cute, flirty and comfortable, in case I need to run and cry in a bathroom after possible rejection. Can you point me in the right direction? — ELIZABETH just one love in this whole world, and I know I've found mine ... Young Love. First Love."

Frankly, the Manolo prefers the 1959 Connie Francis version, as the lyrics, "just one kiss from your sweet lips, will tell me that your love is real," are immensely more poignant when sung by the female, thus capturing, as they do, the exact difficulty of being the romantic young woman in the modern world.

On the one of the hands, the modern young women of feeling is now sometimes required to tell that big lunk with the baseball cap on backward exactly how she feels.

And yet, on the other of the hands, the result may be disappointment, or, to quote Connie Francis again, "Stupid Cupid, you're a real mean guy."

Look, here are the Damara from BCBGirls ($110, Zappos.com), the strappy platform sandal in the lovely rose color. They are also sold in the soft brown hue.

Ask the Manolo a question at manolo@shoeblogs.com. Visit the Manolo at shoeblogs.com.

2 Spice Whirls

SALT, LONG THE BASIC WHITE TEE of the seasoning rack, has morphed into a substance so varied and exotic, we expect it to soon merit its own aisle at Whole Foods. Secret Stash's gourmet grains ($8-$16.50 for 3.5 oz., Secretsalts.com) come in unusual-yet-delish flavors: Pineapple Cumin crying out for a pork loin, Almond Cardamom that gave our salmon Indian flair. Our fave among the fleur de sel-based sprinkles: Nicoise Olive, which worked equally well tossed on chicken breast or (really!) plonked into a martini.

3 Skirting the Issue

FEMININE FABRICS — bright silk, yellow and chocolate plaid taffeta, and coral on white seersucker (shown, $138) — flounce around on Gypsy by Karen Fowler's flirty skirts. They're new on the racks at Periwinkle (1557 Potomac Greens Drive, Alexandria; 703-519-5242). The full, one-size-fits-most styles come in lengths from mini to maxi and pair prettily with a simple tank or fitted tee. They'll star in a trunk show at the boutique June 4 from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. We cannot be blamed if you pick up several for summer weddings or nights out.

4 Duty-Free Decorations

AIR TRAVEL, AS ANYONE who has recently disrobed at Dulles security or unloaded liquids at BWI knows, no longer looks so glamorous. But RCKNDY's smartly framed vintage luggage tags ($110, 1515 U St. NW; 202-332-5639) recall an age when Dutch hotels, Malaysian beaches and other destinations could be reached via luxurious planes, staffed by perky air hostesses who presumably never sneered when you asked for extra pretzels. The bright graphics — think streamlined jets or cheerful islanders — look worldly in multiples or flying solo.

5 All Bands On Deck

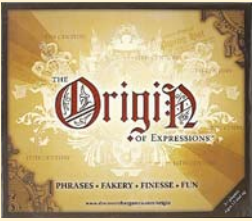

IN THE RACE TO GIVE gadget-heads more extras for their iPods, tech firms have come up with such i-adds as the iHome speaker set, iTrip radio adapter and iSkin funky decorative case. The accessory du jour for techies? Grace Digital's Aqua Sounders floating iPod speaker set ($150; Gracedigitalaudio.net) — or, as we like to call it, the iPod. Be the hit of your condo's rooftop with this nifty wireless waterproof speaker, which can blast tunes while bobbing up to 150 feet away from a landlocked iPod dock. Don't have a pool? The company also suggests plopping it into the tub, which could add a new element to your bathroom warbling.

Smooth Moves

WE CONFESS TO regularly stealing our guy's razor (What? It's much sharper than ours!); his cheapo drug-store shaving cream, not so much. Until now: From May 29 to June 10, Kiehl's (3110 M St. NW; 202-333-5101) is letting dudes trade in their shaving cream (at least 4 oz.) for a free 5 oz. tube of one of its top-of-the-line Ultimate Brushless Shave Cream formulas. There's no purchase necessary — but if you find yourself "borrowing" it too often, that'll have to be worked out between the two of you.

WIN, LOSE OR PARTY

There's something appealingly nostalgic about a game night — which may explain why they're back among the fete set. "Game nights are regaining popularity because they're low in cost and high in fun," says party planner Karen Bussen, author of "Simple Stunning Parties at Home" ($32.50, Stewart, Tabori & Chang), who suggests amping up a stay-in, play-in night with drinks, decor and snacks tied to your board poison of choice. Suffering from Scrabble burnout? We sussed out the newest options and planned ways to party with them. BETSY LOWTHER (EXPRESS)

Origin of Expressions
($25; Bn.com)

HOW TO PLAY: Where did the term "scuttlebutt" come from, anyway? Score points by getting the answer — or creating the best fake one.

THROW IT: A literary party. Encourage guests to come dressed as their stuffiest professor. Have faux pipes and oversized plastic glasses on hand to up the nerd factor.

TIPPLES: Mojitos worked for the prolific Hemingway, and we imagine a few potent pitchers will help get guests going, too. (Or, to find the favorite of another literary lush, try Worldsbiggestcookbook.com/drinks/rich-famous.)

NIBBLES: Serve up brain food like avocados (guacamole dip), nuts (bowls of cashews, almonds or peanuts) and blueberries (try a pie). To finish the night, set out gummy (book) worms.

BONUS CARD: Have guests bring unwanted used books to swap and take home as party favors.

Let's Have a Farkel Party
($20; Pocketfarkel.com)

HOW TO PLAY: An easy-to-follow Yahtzee-like dice game that will appeal to both strategy gamers and closet gamblers. Players take turns rolling the dice, with the option to bank their score or risk it all to try for more.

THROW IT: Various incarnations of Farkel have been played for decades, making it an apropos pairing for a retro-chic party.

TIPPLES: Serve up old-school cocktails — martinis, Manhattans, sloe gin fizzes — and accent with novelty extras such as light-up plastic dice ice cubes ($20 for four, After5catalog.com).

NIBBLES: Kitschy-cool '50s-era snacks — think cheese balls, cream cheese in celery and Chex mix — make for classic, comfort-food accompaniments.

BONUS CARD: Let each round's big winner pick from a grab bag of novelty prizes; try Rpgshop.com for funny novelty dice (lobster-decked!) that guests can take home.

Who What Where
($25; Areyougame.com)

HOW TO PLAY: In this sil-lier cousin of Pictionary, players pick random combinations of nouns, verbs and scenes — e.g., Dorothy and Toto, doing gymnastics, in the shower — that they have to draw. Or at least try to.

THROW IT: An artsy fete. Cover tables with white paper and jars of crayons, and inspire a little pre-game creativity.

TIPPLES: Absinthe was the drink of choice for artists such as Picasso and van Gogh. We'd stick to standard bar fare, but leave out a bowl of gourmet absinthe lollipops (about $2 each; Lollyphile.com) for curious artistes.

NIBBLES: Any finger food goes, but raid the art store for inventive, inexpensive ways to serve it. Painting palettes (starting at $5.50; Utrechtart.com) turn into cute cheese platters; paint brushes double as drink stirrers.

BONUS CARD: Buy simple frames (like Ikea's Nyttja option, $3 for two) and let guests take home their finest masterpieces.

Say Anything
($20; Funagain.com)

HOW TO PLAY: Each player takes a turn answering an arbitrary question — "Who's the biggest musical icon of the past 100 years?" — while the other players wager what the answer might be.

THROW IT: A getting-to-know-you fete. Say Anything is an easy way to get unfamiliar guests (like Aunt Molly and your next-door neighbor) interacting quickly.

TIPPLES: Ask a few guests to provide suggestions for their favorite drinks in advance, then set up stations with the origin, ingredients and instructions on how to make it.

NIBBLES: This type of party definitely calls for potluck. Suggest guests bring their favorite snack foods, then have them share a story about how they found the recipe or why it's their top pick.

BONUS CARD: Hand out superlative awards at the end of the night, like "Funniest," "Most Surprising" and "Best Sport."

Scene It? Movie Second Edition
($42; Screenlifelgames.com)

HOW TO PLAY: Pop-culture fiends will love this film trivia game, which includes a DVD component that offers questions based on popular movie clips.

THROW IT: A Hollywood red carpet party. Have guests come as a film character (an artfully tied sheet channels John Belushi's toga-wearing Bluto in "Animal House"), or provide paper bow ties and feather boas at the door.

TIPPLES: Rename a few cocktails with movie-inspired names ("Terminator-tini") or serve a favorite movie drink (white Russians from "The Big Lebowski"; California wines from "Sideways"). See Boozemovies.com for more cinema-alcohol pairings.

NIBBLES: Popcorn in old-fashioned red-and-white striped containers ($7.50 for 20, Plumparty.com) and boxes of movie candy and Cracker Jack make easy snacks.

BONUS CARD: Know "Seinfeld" or "Friends" freaks? The game has 15 versions, many based on specific shows.

Puffs

When your sofa seems sad or your bed looks boring, a throw pillow functions like a bit of decor bling. Not only can a well-placed pouf dress up your nest, but it can also provide a place to rest your head — or for Mr. Whiskers to nap. “Pillows are a quick way to update, especially if they are colorful and your home is a sea of neutrals,” says Mei Xu, owner of Rockville-based Blisslivinghome.com, which sells sequined bolsters, striped squares and other stylish bits of fluff. But remember, pillows are to a piece of upholstery as a necklace or scarf is to a dress: One or two equals a sleek statement; too many will overwhelm — and overpad — your pad.

The sad sirens of Au Revoir Simone are at the Rock and Roll Hotel on Saturday.

FRIDAY

Loda at Silver Spring's GALLERY has emerged as one of the area's consistent go-to options for electronic music: The Friday night party has brought big names such as Carl Craig and Kevin Saunderson. Martyn might not be in that same stratosphere, but his brand of drum 'n' bass has quickly made him a name to know on the circuit.

SATURDAY

Au Revoir Simone plays synth-pop, but it sure isn't bubbly and bouncy. The trio's third — and best — album, "Still Night, Still Light," stays in a constant state of mope. But sadness suits these three ladies well. The cooing harmonies and subtle shifts are more interesting than just another keyboard-driven rave-up. Sad songs might not be the best soundtrack for a Saturday night, but there are plenty of other opportunities to get happy. Jeffrey Lewis and the Antlers open at the ROCK AND ROLL HOTEL.

BYT Summer Camp has arrived. Dug the dog, Russell the scout and Carl the widower are in for the ride of their lives in Pixar's touching (and visually dazzling) film "Up."

'Up' & Away

Pixar's new film will carry you into a world of creative, high-flying adventure

FILM | The title is deceptively simple, which is fitting, because the latest achievement from Pixar Animation is deeper and more complex on every level than it would initially appear.

It's a classic B-movie exotic adventure, the kind that inspired Steven Spielberg and George Lucas to make "Raiders of the Lost Ark," but it's told through the most high-tech, gorgeous 3-D animation.

It's a mismatched buddy comedy, the kind we've seen countless times before, but the buddies are a curmudgeonly 78-year-old man and a tubby 8-year-old boy — who wind up together in a flying house, traveling to South America. And, as with many family films that get pumped out each summer, it has talking dogs. But it's how the dogs talk and what they say that are truly inspired and oddly realistic.

'UP'

→ DIRECTOR: Pete Docter

→ STARS: Jordan Nagai, Ed Asner

→ IN A NUTSHELL:

A widower takes a journey to South America with an unexpected travel companion.

→ FOR FANS OF: Any Pixar films, buddy comedies or adventure flicks

Pixar's Evolution

Pete Docter (Pixar's "Monsters, Inc.") and co-director and writer Bob Peterson turn their imagination this time to human beings, rare creatures in the animated kingdom. But between the richness of the characters, the meatiness of their interaction and the authenticity of the details, it won't take you long to forget that "Up" is a cartoon and become immersed. Ed Asner is the perfect choice to voice cranky widower Carl Fredricksen, who ties thousands of helium balloons to his house and takes to the skies, with endearing newcomer Jordan Nagai playing the overeager scout, Russell, who's trapped on his front porch.

They make an unlikely but lovable pair: the rigid Carl (who resembles a latter-day Spencer Tracy with his linear mouth, square-shaped glasses and bushy white hair) and the ebullient Russell. Their bond is sweet, their journey joyous.

We won't tell you the direction "Up" goes from here. We'll just say it's creative and unexpected, like everything that came before it and the other films in the Pixar canon.

LABELS Hova's New Home Jay-Z is close to signing a deal with Sony. The deal — which will link Jay-Z's Roc Nation releases with Sony's Epic Records for distribution — "is 95 percent complete," according to sources familiar with the negotiations. Just last week, Jay-Z confirmed his departure from longtime label home Def Jam. His split from the label reportedly came with a $5 million price tag but left the rap artist and label executive in control of his future master recordings. (BILLBOARD.COM)

Raimi Makes Haute Horror

The ‘Spider-Man’ director uses humor and high-tech tricks in ‘Drag Me to Hell’

FILM | The name alone, “Drag Me to Hell,” tells you exactly what this is: an unabashed celebration of B-movie schlockery. But the dichotomies director Sam Raimi presents within that familiar genre are what make this such a kick. Raimi returns to the kind of cheeky horror that made him a cult favorite with the low-budget “Evil Dead” trilogy, but he applies all the high-tech tricks he’s acquired with the blockbuster “Spider-Man” franchise. He and brother Ivan Raimi have written a rather old-fashioned terror tale, full of curses and creaks, bumps and shrieks, but they’ve added a heavy splattering of their trademark dark humor. All these contradictions add up to one hell of a ride: You’ll squirm, you’ll scream, you’ll laugh your butt off and beg for more. Alison Lohman’s character, the innocent Christine Brown, gets way more than she ever could have imagined. A bank loan officer competing for a promotion, she denies a creepy old woman an extension on her mortgage loan, thinking that’s the right decision to impress her boss (David Paymer). It turns out she turned down the wrong customer: Mrs. Ganush (Lorna Raver) is a vengeful gypsy who feels so shamed, she places a powerful curse on Christine that torments her day and night. As in Raimi’s underseen but suspenseful “A Simple Plan,” “Drag Me to Hell” tracks what happens when an ordinary person finds herself in an extraordinary circumstance. Lohman makes this crazy scenario almost relatable because she’s just like you and me: She probably means well, but her ambition leads her down a dangerous path. You’ll be glad you got dragged along with her. CHRISTY LEMIRE (AP) combination of fake instruments, so if everyone wants to play drums, they can.

"Guitar Hero" is also enjoying its status as a star-maker for bands such as Wolfmother, which got a boost when its "Woman" appeared on "Guitar Hero II."

Sherr said another Interscope act stands to gain from its first video-game appearance. TV on the Radio is one of the most acclaimed bands in the United States, but its sales haven't kept pace with its critical reputation. "Guitar Hero 5" will expose millions of people to the band," Sherr said.

Others on the 82-band roster include the usual suspects (Bon Jovi, Iron Maiden, Queens of the Stone Age), some fresh faces (Band of Horses, Arctic Monkeys, Vampire Weekend) and a few classic rockers who are new to the franchise (Tom Petty, John Mellencamp, Elton John).

"Guitar Hero 5" will reach stores Sept. 1, a week before "The Beatles: Rock Band" from rival MTV Games. LOU KESTEN (AP)

ANGELS & DEMONS (PG-13, 138 minutes) Praying for another $750 million absolution at the global box office, the fairly unholy trinity of Tom Hanks, director Ron Howard and “Da Vinci Code” author Dan Brown reteam on Brown’s earlier novel and manage to be more obscure than a Latin Mass. As Robert Langdon, Hanks is recruited by a mysterious emissary of a mysterious biotech firm to help explain the mysterious death of a mysterious scientist whose chest was branded by his killer with the word “Illuminati,” an ancient league of science-minded elites. What the killer was after was antimatter, which the killer promises will be used to level St. Peter’s Basilica. As he embarks on a mission to save Roman Catholicism, Langdon encounters a young papal assistant (Ewan McGregor) a churlish Vatican policeman (Stellan Skarsgard) and an imperious cardinal (Armin Mueller-Stahl). The filmmakers may have faith, but they also know that God helps those who help themselves. (JA)

ANVIL! THE STORY OF ANVIL (Unrated, 90 minutes) This riveting new documentary is about a couple of old Canadian headbangers who are still chasing the heavy-metal dream, and — lo — it plays like a reality-based version of Rob Reiner’s epochal 1984 heavy-metal mockumentary, “This Is Spinal Tap.” There’s a disastrously attended European tour and a semi-triumphant comeback concert in Japan. Oh, and the drummer’s name is Robb Reiner. Seriously. But “Anvil!” is no joke, even if it’s full of hilarious moments. Rather, it’s a poignant portrait of Reiner and singer-guitarist Steve “Lips” Kudlow, the Anvil co-founders. “For all this horrible [expletive] that I got to go through, I’ve got Anvil. That gives me happiness,” Kudlow says. “It works out really good. Because even though Anvil doesn’t give me pay, it gives me the joy and the pleasure that you need to get through life.”

If a home doesn't have forced air heat, installing ductwork for central air conditioning can mean major remodeling and expense. But a Unique Indoor Comfort system doesn't require large metal ductwork or major remodeling. All that's visible are small round outlets in every room. What's more, Unique Indoor Comfort offers Lennox high efficiency equipment. it seems, even the dialogue by writer-director Rian Johnson. "He writes life the way dead Russians write novels," says Bloom (Adrien Brody) of his brother, Stephen (Mark Ruffalo). Ricky Jay narrates the story about brothers who are born con artists, booted from foster home to foster home as kids, with no one noticing that they manage to dress like Franz Kafka circa 1893 Bohemia or that they're capable of conning an entire fifth grade. The highly stacy intro to the mini-Blooms is probably the best set piece in the film, which is all archness and set pieces, leading to the brothers' working their game on an heiress named Penelope (Rachel Weisz). It's also a charmer, a witty sandbagging of one's resistance to fairy tale and a movie about the struggles of three animal families to survive against the elements. They are the ads that begin, "Wherever there is life, there are stories." That's really what this movie is: a gorgeously photographed storybook. It starts with a mother polar bear and her two cubs in Norway, moves to equatorial Africa for a look at a herd of elephants searching for water and ends with the journey of a humpback whale and her calf to Antarctica. (M)

GHOSTS OF GIRLFRIENDS PAST (PG-13, 100 minutes) Modeled as a kind of sexual athlete's counterpart to Ebenezer Scrooge, photographer Connor Mead (Matthew McConaughey) shuns emotional attachments and disdains marriage. The inspiration for Connor's approach to relationships is his late Uncle Wayne (Michael Douglas), an ardent misogynist who says that Connor will be visited by three ghosts to drive home the message. JAN STUART THE GIRLFRIEND EXPERIENCE (R, 77 minutes) In Steven Soderbergh's icicle-sharp portrait of a modern-day lady of the evening, the hooker with a heart of gold gives way to the fantasy date with the business acumen of a Wall Street banker. Soderbergh tracks several days in the life of Chelsea (Sasha Grey), a self-employed call girl who commands $2,000 an hour and a clientele that can drop that sort of change without losing a wink of sleep. Buried deep beneath all that is a driven daughter of commerce who is just as ambitious as her high-rolling johns and every bit as stressed over the impact of the plunging economy. The film manages a career-spanning panache: Soderbergh

DANCE FLICK (PG-13, 83 minutes) The extended Wayans family of film and TV comics brings us this stunningly crude, tiresome spoof of just about every teen-focused dance movie of recent memory. Would-be dancer Megan (Shoshana Bush) loses her mother and moves in with her dad (Chris Elliott). At her new high school, she meets Thomas (Damon Wayans Jr.). They fall in love and work on dance routines. But Thomas has to deal with violent rivals from a street dance contest and an oversize gangster named Sugar Bear (David Alan Grier, who is truly funny). THE LIMITS OF CONTROL (PG-13, 90 minutes) Jim Jarmusch's latest meditation on male soloism has no emotion, no compelling characters, no unity of effect and, consequently, no good reason to be seen. It does have great actors slumming as vague philosophical notions, though. Bill Murray, Tilda Swinton, John Hurt and Gael García Bernal pass in front of Jarmusch's camera and say weird things. A lone man in a sharkskin suit (Isaach De Bankolé) encounters each of them while on an undefined criminal mission in Spain. He must rely on these strange people to lead him from clue to clue, location to location, till he arrives at his mark. (DZ)

MANAGEMENT (R, 93 minutes) Traveling alone on business, an attractive single woman named Sue (Jennifer Aniston) checks into a seedy Arizona roadside motel, only to find the tongue-tied night manager, Mike (Steve Zahn), lurking outside her door with a bottle of cheap wine, "compliments of the management." "You have a nice butt," he tells her. Sue flies home to Maryland, never to hear from him again. Until he shows up on her doorstep. I'm not saying he can't do creepy, but if Zahn showed up outside your seedy motel room — even if he were carrying a

NIGHT AT THE MUSEUM: BATTLE OF THE SMITHSONIAN (PG, 105 minutes)

The Smithsonian Institution gives a fantastic performance in Ben Stiller's new family comedy; the museum sparkles, but the movie is awfully dull. Last seen wowing his son by handling the late-night shenanigans at the Museum of Natural History, onetime night guard Larry Daley (Stiller) is now a CEO. On one of his visits back to the museum, he learns that most of his moonlight pals — Dexter the capuchin and belligerent tiny cowboy Jedediah (Owen Wilson) among them — are being shipped to Washington. Stiller underplays a little too much. Coming off much better is Amy Adams, who plays irrepressible Amelia Earhart. If the producers are smart, they'll sign Adams up for a spin-off posthaste. DAN KOIS

RUDO Y CURSI (R, 103 minutes) Gael Garcia Bernal and Diego Luna are brothers Tato and Beto, two banana farmers in southern Mexico whose only escape from agrarian toil is soccer. As luck would have it, they are scouted by a sports agent 10 minutes into the movie. The more talented but less passionate one wins out, and he nails a spot on a professional team. The other sets his own course for the pros. The simple plot is decorated with fast camera work, saturated colors and a constant soundtrack. This is not a sports movie; but for lovers of Luna and Bernal, especially Luna and Bernal together, the film will be a quick, harmless, caffeinated booster shot until their next collaboration. (DZ)

THE SOLOIST (PG-13, 119 minutes) The true story of a newspaper columnist (Robert Downey Jr.) and his friendship with a schizophrenic street musician in Los Angeles (Jamie Foxx), the film is suffused with heartbreak and humanism as it takes one man's grim story — early promise, bright future, mental breakdown, despair — and turns it into a spiritual meditation on friendship. Downey plays Los Angeles Times columnist Steve Lopez, who happens upon Nathaniel Ayers (Foxx) playing a two-stringed violin in downtown Los Angeles' Pershing Square. Lopez discovers that Ayers once attended Juilliard, and his resulting columns wind up taking the writer not only into the tortured history and mind of his subject, but also into the Bosch-like world of the city's Skid Row. (AH)

STAR TREK (PG-13, 127 minutes) Let us pray. Lord of "Star Trek" and all its spinoffs, we thank thee for a movie that, against all odds, has miraculously resurrected a wheezing but beloved franchise. We thank thee for an origin story that, unlike such recent downers featuring the Incredible Hulk and Wolverine, pays affectionate respect to its source material but never falls into the trap of slavish worship. We thank thee for Zachary Quinto, who plays Spock with surprising pathos. We thank thee for a setup that pits James T. Kirk (Chris Pine) and Spock against each other, giving the film its fraternal rivalry. But most of all, we thank thee for director J.J. Abrams, who proves such an able steward of this narrative and these characters. We thank thee for imbuing Abrams with taste and conscience enough to guarantee that the franchise will once again live long and prosper. May he do the same. Amen. (AH)

TERMINATOR SALVATION (PG-13, 116 minutes) The latest installment in the "Terminator" series offers towering mechanical assassins; writhing, chrome-plated centipedes; humans engaged in an epic battle, all in a movie that mixes summer blockbuster hysterics with moody, visual grit. Director McG picks up the pre-apocalyptic cue from "T3" and drops us in 2018, with the machines of the malevolent Skynet well into their campaign against humankind. Leader-to-be of the human rebellion John Connor (Christian Bale) is an insubordinate lieutenant but has been prophesied to be the savior of humankind. That might have come off as pretentious but instead seems believable — as believable as a movie can be, anyway, when it's about besieged humanity, occupational forces, rebel insurgencies, torture, lawlessness and warfare by remote control. (JA)

TYSON (R, 90 minutes) James Toback's film is a sort of guided tour through Mike Tyson's mind with the former prizefighter playing psychic usher. It tells us even more about our irresolvable contradictions: We destroy the things we love. We repeat mistakes. We dance like Muhammad Ali around the truth, even in our most candid moments. Tyson just does it more spectacularly than most. (DT)

WOLVERINE (PG-13, 107 minutes) Hugh

Jackman may be the contractual star of this Marvel Comics-inspired production, which explores (creates) the history of one of Marvel's most popular and conflicted heroes, but technology is what makes the movie what it is. The story starts in 1845, in Canada, where young brothers James and Victor see the man they think is their father gunned down. Throughout history, James (Jackman) and Victor (Liev Schreiber) kick major enemy butt together. Victor/Sabretooth is always the more sadistic of the two. He's one twisted dude, actually, and James, aka Logan, aka Wolverine, constantly has to rein him in. But you can see where this is going: conflict. (JA)

Fantasy-Biography

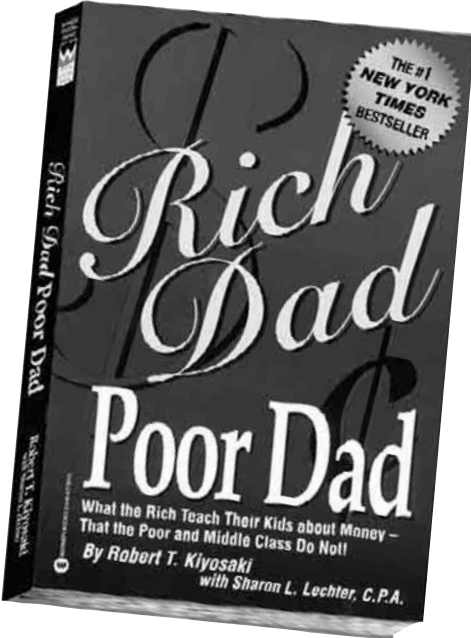

To emotionally escape his childhood home of Winnipeg, Canadian filmmaker Guy Maddin has created a delirious documentary (of sorts) wherein he casts actors to play his family and re-enacts scenes from his early life. One thing's for sure: "My Winnipeg" is no love letter to an idyllic, bucolic hometown. But it's also fantastic, funny, strange and sad. And free! f.z.

Rich Dad Poor Dad

My Poor Dad would say,
"I Work For My Money."
My Rich Dad said,
"My Money Works For Me."
- Robert Kiyosaki

One dad was highly educated and intelligent; he had a Ph.D. and had completed four years of undergraduate work in less than two years. He then went to do his advanced studies... all on full financial scholarships.

My other dad never finished the eighth grade. Both men were successful in their careers, working hard all their lives. Both earned substantial incomes.

Yet my highly educated dad struggled financially all his life and the other dad would become one of the richest men I had ever known. One died leaving tens of millions of dollars to his family, charities, and his church. The other left a legacy of unpaid bills. Both men were strong, charismatic, and influential.

Both men offered me advice, but they did not advise the same things. Having two dads as advisors offered me the perspective of contrasting points of view: one of a rich man and one of a poor man. This forced me to think about, and ultimately choose, a way of thinking for myself. A way of thinking that assures long-term wealth and true prosperity!

The Gracious Host

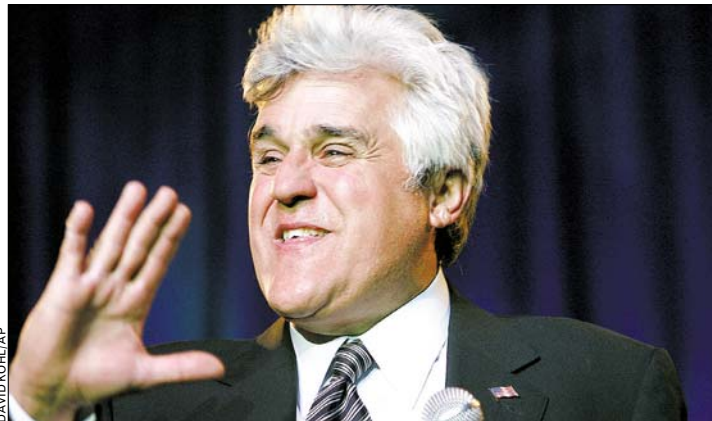

Dependable late-night
personality Jay Leno
bids his show adieu

FAREWELLS | An appraisal of a veteran talk-show host and comedian should have lots to say about his funniness.

Let's just credit Jay Leno with persistence.

Tonight, Leno surrenders his job as host of NBC's "Tonight Show" after 17 years. It's a job he won against stiff competition. Then, early in his run, it's a job he defended against NBC bosses who were having second thoughts.

Since the mid-1990s, he has won the late-night ratings war. With a smile on his face and never a complaint, he has worked tirelessly. And even now, with Conan O'Brien set to take over Monday (thanks to NBC's transition plan that made Leno a late-night lame duck five years ago), he isn't really leaving. He's moving up. Next fall, "The Jay Leno Show" will premiere on NBC weeknights at 10 p.m.

Leno's relatable demeanor gave him wide appeal as host of "The Tonight Show."

At age 59, NBC has made Leno lord of nearly one-fourth of its crumbling prime-time manor.

He has been a sturdy placeholder. Big chin, unfailingly likable. The sort of regular guy with whom his audience identifies. This evening, Jay sits on his throne for the last time and hosts Conan O'Brien and James Taylor. As of next week, he'll be getting ready for prime time.

PRIME MINISTER | Brendan Gleeson stars as eminently quotable prime minister Winston Churchill in "Into the Storm" (9 p.m., Sunday, HBO).

The film covers the five years that were his "finest hour" (a line curiously absent here), from 1940 to 1945, when Churchill, armed only with his will and his furious eloquence, rallied the population of an embattled island from near-certain defeat to triumph over Hitler. ROLES Play Deadly John Lithgow is joining the cast of Showtime's drama "Dexter." Lithgow will appear in all 12 episodes of the show's upcoming fourth season, playing Walter Simmons, Miami's latest serial killer and Dexter Morgan's (Michael C. Hall) new nemesis. Simmons is described as an unassuming suburbanite who has been living a double life. (THE HOLLYWOOD REPORTER)

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're not about to share certain secrets with just anyone. Be sure that those who are in a position to know are worthy of knowing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You may have to carry a personal burden longer than expected. The journey is just beginning, but the outlook is positive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) What goes on behind closed doors may have to be revealed to the world at large tomorrow or the next day. Prepare your statement.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The difference between fantasy and reality is likely to be revealed to you in dramatic and undeniable terms.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You may find certain developments unsettling at work or at home—but negative effects need not be permanent. Answer questions honestly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) The more friendly and cooperative you are, the more likely it is that you will have the support you really need tomorrow.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You mustn't get so immersed in work that you turn your back on domestic issues that demand attention. Loved ones will object.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You get what you pay for—and the adage is just as true as it has ever been. Be ready to give much in exchange for what you really want.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Are you ready to head down an unfamiliar road unattended? You know certain dangers—but others will surely be new.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Focus on doing the thing that has been assigned to you. Only after fulfilling certain duties can you enjoy your freedom.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You can expect those around you to be full of excitement and anticipation, thanks to the plans you have only recently made.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may not know exactly what questions you must ask, but any will do to start. Later on, you'll understand your needs even more.
